Summary of findings

Overall summary

Isle Court Nursing Home is a residential care home that was providing personal and nursing care to 60 people aged 65 and over at the time of the inspection. The service can support up to 80 people across four separate units.

At the time of this inspection, we did not look at the whole service, we solely inspected the areas that had been identified for the designated setting. This was a further inspection to the service for an additional five beds to accommodate 12 people and seven people were residing there at the time of inspection.

We found the following examples of good practice.

- People residing on the unit identified for the designated setting self isolated in line with current guidance. People were supported by a cohort of staff who worked solely on the self-contained unit.
- People who had tested positive for Covid-19 accessed the home through a separate entrance.
- Where people were required to move through a communal area, such as a corridor, clear procedures were in place to ensure the area was deep cleaned immediately.
- People were supported to communicate with their relatives through telephone and video calls on a flexible basis and there were processes in place to accommodate visits when the need arose.
- People had access to their own individual full en-suite facilities which reduced the risk of transmission of infection.
- People were supported by staff who wore Personal Protective Equipment (PPE) in line with current guidance and were fully trained in infection prevention and control.
- Infection prevention and control audit checks were in place and where actions were identified, they were addressed in a timely manner.
- Risk assessments identified staff who were disproportionately at risk of Covid-19 and appropriate action taken to maintain their safety.

We were assured that this service met good infection prevention and control guidelines as a designated care setting.
