Summary of findings

Overall summary

About the service

Infinite Homecare Limited is a domiciliary care service providing personal care and support to people living in their own homes. Not everyone who used the service received personal care. The Care Quality Commission (CQC) only inspects where people receive personal care. This is help with tasks related to personal hygiene and eating. Where they do, we also consider any wider social care provided. At the time of the inspection the service was providing personal care to 10 people.

People's experience of using this service and what we found

People and relatives were happy with the support they received and spoke positively about staff. One person told us, "The service is excellent, they are always on time." A relative said, "Very caring, super service."

Risks to people's health, safety and well-being were effectively managed. Medicines were administered safely. The provider had effective infection prevention and control systems in place.

Effective recruitment procedures were in place and there were enough staff employed to meet people's needs. Staff received regular training and supervision to provide care in a person-centred way.

Support was personalised and based on people's assessed needs and preferences. Staff worked effectively with external professionals to ensure people received the support they wanted and needed. People were supported to have maximum choice and control of their lives and staff supported them in the least restrictive way possible. The policies and systems in the service supported this practice.

People and their relatives were involved in making decisions about their care. Staff respected people's privacy and dignity and promoted their independence. People and relatives were aware of the provider's complaints procedure and felt confident to raise concerns.

Systems were in place to monitor and develop standards at the service. Feedback was sought and valued. The provider promoted continuous learning and improvement.

This was an 'inspection using remote technology'. This means we did not visit the office location and instead used technology such as electronic file sharing to gather information, and video and phone calls to engage with people using the service as part of this performance review and assessment.

Detailed findings

Background to this inspection

The inspection

We carried out this performance review and assessment under Section 46 of the Health and Social Care Act 2008 (the Act). We checked whether the provider was meeting the legal requirements of the regulations associated with the Act and looked at the quality of the service to provide a rating.

Unlike our standard approach to assessing performance, we did not physically visit the office of the location. This is a new approach we have introduced to reviewing and assessing performance of some care at home providers. Instead of visiting the office location we use technology such as electronic file sharing and video or phone calls to engage with people using the service and staff.

Inspection team

The inspection was carried out by one inspector and an Expert by Experience. An Expert by Experience is a person who has personal experience of using or caring for someone who uses this type of care service.

Service and service type

The service is a domiciliary care service. It provides personal care to people living in their own homes.

This service is required to have a registered manager. A registered manager is a person who has registered with the Care Quality Commission to manage the service. This means that they and the provider are legally responsible for how the service is run and for the quality and safety of the care provided.

At the time of our inspection there was a registered manager in post.

Notice of inspection

We gave the service 24 hours' notice of the inspection. This was to make arrangements to carry out a virtual inspection and we needed to be sure that the provider or registered manager would be available to support the inspection.

Inspection activity started on 27 July 2022 and ended on 4 August 2022. We contacted people and relatives on 4 August 2022.

What we did before inspection

We reviewed information we held about the service. We sought feedback from the local authority, professionals who work with the service and Healthwatch. Healthwatch is an independent consumer champion that gathers and represents the views of the public about health and social care services in England. Due to technical problems, the provider was not able to complete a Provider Information Return (PIR). A PIR is information providers send us to give some key information about the service, what the service does well and improvements they plan to make. We used all of this information to plan our inspection.

During the inspection

We spoke with four people who used the service and four relatives about their experience of the care provided. We spoke with five members of staff, including the registered manager, the provider and three care staff.

We reviewed a range of records including two people's care and medicines records. We looked at recruitment records for two members of staff. A variety of records relating to the management of the service, including policies and procedures, were also reviewed.

This performance review and assessment was carried out without a visit to the location's office. We used technology such as video/telephone calls and emails to enable us to engage with people using the service and staff, and electronic file sharing to enable us to review documentation.

Following the inspection

We continued to seek clarification from the provider to validate evidence found. We reviewed all evidence sent to us electronically by the provider.

Is the service safe?

Our findings

Safe – this means we looked for evidence that people were protected from abuse and avoidable harm.

This is the first inspection for this newly registered service. This key question has been rated good. This meant people were safe and protected from avoidable harm.

Systems and processes to safeguard people from the risk of abuse

- The provider had effective safeguarding systems in place.
- People were protected from the risk of abuse and told us they felt safe in the presence of staff. One person told us, "I feel very safe with them, they are excellent."
- Staff received safeguarding training and knew how to report concerns.

Assessing risk, safety monitoring and management

- Staff effectively assessed, monitored and managed risks to people's personal safety and wellbeing.
- Care plans contained detailed risk assessments about people's individual care, support and environmental needs.
- The provider had a business continuity plan so people would continue to receive safe and effective care in emergency situations.

Staffing and recruitment

- Staffing levels and recruitment procedures were safely managed. Effective out of hours arrangements were in place and staff worked well to cover unexpected absences as a team.
- People confirmed they received care from a consistent staff team, and they were always on time. One relative told us, "No missed calls, without doubt, they do a good job."
- Safe recruitment procedures were in place and staff files contained appropriate background checks.

Using medicines safely

- Staff administered and managed people's medicines safely. People were happy with the support they received to take their medicines. One person told us, "I get my medicine on time."
- Staff received medicines administration training and were knowledgeable about people's medicines.
- The registered manager carried out regular medicine audits and staff competence checks.

Preventing and controlling infection

- People were protected from the risk of infection. The provider's infection prevention and control policy was up to date and procedures were in place to effectively prevent or manage infection outbreaks.
- Staff effectively used personal protective equipment (PPE) and followed good infection control practices. One relative told us, "Staff are very professional, they always wear PPE and wash their hands."
- Staff were trained in infection prevention and control and regularly tested for COVID-19.

Learning lessons when things go wrong

- The registered manager took clear and timely action to record, report and investigate any incidents or accidents.
- Staff told us the registered manager shared lessons learned with them.

Is the service effective?

Our findings

Effective – this means we looked for evidence that people's care, treatment and support achieved good outcomes and promoted a good quality of life, based on best available evidence.

This is the first inspection for this newly registered service. This key question has been rated good. This meant people's outcomes were consistently good, and people's feedback confirmed this.

Assessing people's needs and choices; delivering care in line with standards, guidance and the law

- Staff carried out comprehensive assessments of people's needs and choices before they started using the service. Assessments were continually evaluated and reviewed to ensure people received the care that met their needs.

Staff support: induction, training, skills and experience

- Staff completed a comprehensive induction and received regular training.
- People and their relatives were confident the staff had the right skills to provide the care and support they needed. One relative told us, "They understand what he needs." One professional told us, "Staffs knowledge and competency of moving and handling is excellent."
- Staff told us they felt supported through regular supervisions and observations. One member of staff said, "The management support me 100%." Another staff member said, "I can't fault the registered manager, I feel very supported."

Ensuring consent to care and treatment in line with law and guidance

The Mental Capacity Act 2005 (MCA) provides a legal framework for making particular decisions on behalf of people who may lack the mental capacity to do so for themselves. The MCA requires that, as far as possible, people make their own decisions and are helped to do so when needed. When they lack mental capacity to take particular decisions, any made on their behalf must be in their best interests and as least restrictive as possible.

People can only be deprived of their liberty to receive care and treatment when this is in their best interests and legally authorised under the MCA. When people receive care and treatment in their own homes an application must be made to the Court of Protection for them to authorise people to be deprived of their liberty. We checked whether the service was working within the principles of the MCA.

- The service worked within the principles of the MCA.
- Staff received MCA training and sought consent from people prior to providing support.
- People were supported to make as many decisions as possible for themselves.

Supporting people to eat and drink enough to maintain a balanced diet

- Staff supported people to maintain a balanced diet.
- Care plans contained information on people's nutritional needs and preferences.

Staff working with other agencies to provide consistent, effective, timely care; Supporting people to live healthier lives, access healthcare services and support

- Staff worked well with other professionals to ensure people received effective care such as GPs and occupational therapists. One person told us, "I have just come out of the hospital with COVID-19, it was picked up by the correct level of care. They knew something was wrong and they got in touch with the doctor." One relative said, "[Name] can discuss her health with the staff and they contact the GP if they think it's necessary."

Is the service caring?

Our findings

Caring – this means we looked for evidence that the service involved people and treated them with compassion, kindness, dignity and respect.

This is the first inspection for this newly registered service. This key question has been rated good. This meant people were supported and treated with dignity and respect; and involved as partners in their care.

Ensuring people are well treated and supported; respecting equality and diversity

- Staff were enthusiastic about ensuring people received good care.
- People and relatives were complimentary about the care and support provided. One relative told us, "The staff are always very pleasant and helpful to her." Another relative said, "I think they are good."
- Staff understood the importance of treating people as individuals. They were aware of equality and diversity issues and recognised each person was unique with their own lifestyle and needs.

Supporting people to express their views and be involved in making decisions about their care

- People were empowered to make choices and have as much control in the delivery of their care, as possible. One person told us, "They listen to everything I have to say, they are very understanding. I cannot praise them enough." A relative said, "I'm fully involved in her care planning, the manager keeps in touch about her health."
- Staff involved people and their relatives in day to day discussions about their care. One person told us, "I always have a good chat when they are here."

Respecting and promoting people's privacy, dignity and independence

- People's right to privacy and confidentiality was respected. Staff promoted people's independence, without compromising safety. One relative told us, "They understand her and respect her. All the carers have a good relationship with her."
- Staff treated people with dignity and provided compassionate support in an individualised way. One person said, "They always have time to talk to me in a polite way."

Is the service responsive?

Our findings

Responsive – this means we looked for evidence that the service met people's needs.

This is the first inspection for this newly registered service. This key question has been rated good. This meant people's needs were met through good organisation and delivery.

Planning personalised care to ensure people have choice and control and to meet their needs and preferences

- Care plans were person-centred and regularly reviewed. They contained detailed information about people's daily routines and specific care and support needs.
- Staff knew people's preferences well and were responsive to their changing needs.

Supporting people to develop and maintain relationships to avoid social isolation; support to follow interests and to take part in activities that are socially and culturally relevant to them

- Staff supported people to participate in activities and events which were meaningful to them including, playing dominoes, cooking and going shopping. One person told us, "They treat me nicely. When they come in the evening, or teatime, they ask if I haven't been out, then they take me out for half an hour of fresh air."

Meeting people's communication needs

Since 2016 all organisations that provide publicly funded adult social care are legally required to follow the Accessible Information Standard. The Accessible Information Standard tells organisations what they have to do to help ensure people with a disability or sensory loss, and in some circumstances, their carers, get information in a way they can understand it. It also says that people should get the support they need in relation to communication.

- People's communication needs were assessed and regularly reviewed.
- Staff were knowledgeable about the most effective ways to communicate with people. One relative told us, "The communication is very effective."
- The provider ensured people had information accessible to them in different formats, when needed.

Improving care quality in response to complaints or concerns

- Procedures were in place to investigate and respond to complaints.
- People and relatives knew how to raise concerns. One person told us, "They really care, I have no complaints whatsoever."

End of life care and support

- People's end of life wishes were respected.
- Care plans contained details of people's decisions and religious beliefs.

Is the service well-led?

Our findings

Well-Led – this means we looked for evidence that service leadership, management and governance assured high-quality, person-centred care; supported learning and innovation; and promoted an open, fair culture.

This is the first inspection for this newly registered service. This key question has been rated good. This meant the service was consistently managed and well-led. Leaders and the culture they created promoted high-quality, person-centred care.

Managers and staff being clear about their roles, and understanding quality performance, risks and regulatory requirements

- The registered manager and staff understood their roles and the importance of complying with regulatory requirements.
- Staff performance was routinely monitored, and regular audits were conducted to improve service delivery. Areas of risk were routinely assessed and mitigated.
- The service was well managed. Staff morale and teamwork were good.

How the provider understands and acts on the duty of candour, which is their legal responsibility to be open and honest with people when something goes wrong

- The provider and registered manager understood their responsibility under the duty of candour. They knew the importance of being open and honest, and when to apologise, investigate and respond.

Promoting a positive culture that is person-centred, open, inclusive and empowering, which achieves good outcomes for people

- Staff supported people to achieve good outcomes and maintain their well-being. People were central to the culture of the service. One professional told us, "Staff are very experienced and confident in delivering a person-centred care package."
- People and their relatives were complimentary about the registered manager. Comments included, "The manager is a lovely lady", "She is approachable and very accommodative" and "No problem with the management. They are absolutely good people."
- Staff told us they enjoyed their job and felt valued. One member of staff told us, 'The service would go to the ends of the earth for people.' Another staff member said, "We are like a family and provide a personal touch."

Engaging and involving people using the service, the public and staff, fully considering their equality characteristics

- The provider and registered manager positively encouraged feedback about the service.
- People, relatives and staff were given regular opportunities to share their views. This included reviews, questionnaires and regular communication.
- Staff spoke highly about the provider and registered manager. One staff member described the management as, "Amazing." Another staff member said, "They are excellent at communicating with staff."

Continuous learning and improving care

- The service was committed to continuous learning and improvement.
- Effective systems were in place to successfully identify areas for improvement and lessons learned. This included regular audits, spot checks and supervisions.

Working in partnership with others

- The provider worked with local commissioners and key organisations to promote good outcomes for people. One professional told us, "The agency is excellent."
